A.—In view of the present economic depression and consequent unemployment among the rural population, the Government have sanctioned a scheme involving a capital expenditure of Rs. 50 lakhs for an accelerated programme of improvements to minor works of irrigation on a three-year plan. The programme has been primarily directed to strengthening bunds and, where necessary, other parts of irrigation works, and the works selected have been spread out as far as possible over the various districts due regard being had to the availability of labour, the possible working season, and to the fact that the necessity is less in certain well-favoured tracts. The programme is in course of execution.
